CELEBRATE

Texas Archives Month
October 2018

Sponsored by the Texas Historical Records Advisory Board. Funding provided by the National Historical Publications and Records Commission.
Archival repositories document the cultural traditions of Texans by preserving the images, media, manuscripts and maps detailing the history of the people of the state. Digital collections connect researchers and casual visitors alike to vivid depictions of the ceremonial dances, annual festivals, family gatherings and lively celebrations that unify groups and tell their stories over time. Celebrate Texas Archives Month with a virtual visit to wonderful resources available at the click of a mouse.

Two Mexican-American Dancers Twirling Their Skirts, photograph, [1972-09-07...1972-09-10]; (texashistory.unt.edu/ark:/67531/metalth227234/): accessed August 31, 2018), University of North Texas Libraries, The Portal to Texas History, texashistory.unt.edu; crediting UT San Antonio Libraries Special Collections.

Howard, Laura. San Antonio Lion Dance Association Chinese Dancers, photograph, [1999-08-05...1999-08-08]; (texashistory.unt.edu/ark:/67531/metapth302178/): accessed August 31, 2018), University of North Texas Libraries, The Portal to Texas History, texashistory.unt.edu; crediting UT San Antonio Libraries Special Collections.

Czech Folk Dancers of the West, photograph, [1986-07-31…1986-08-03]; (texashistory.unt.edu/ark:/67531/metapth285700/): accessed August 31, 2018), University of North Texas Libraries, The Portal to Texas History, texashistory.unt.edu; crediting UT San Antonio Libraries Special Collections.

Archival repositories document the cultural traditions of Texans by preserving the images, media, manuscripts and maps detailing the history of the people of the state. Digital collections connect researchers and casual visitors alike to vivid depictions of the ceremonial dances, annual festivals, family gatherings and lively celebrations that unify groups and tell their stories over time. Celebrate Texas Archives Month with a virtual visit to wonderful resources available at the click of a mouse.